Home Schooling Parent Information

Section 1327.1 of the Pennsylvania School code provides for a home education program designed to permit parents, guardians and legal custodians (“supervisors”) to conduct home education programs for their children.

Prior to the commencement of a home education program, the supervisor must submit a notarized affidavit to the Superintendent of the school district in accordance with Section 1327.1(b)(1) and 1327(d).

Pursuant to subsection (e)(1), the Department has approved ten nationally normed standardized tests for home school use. They are in alphabetical order:

1. California Achievement Test
2. Comprehensive Testing Program (CTPIII)
3. Comprehensive Test of Basic Skills
4. Iowa Test of Basic Skills
5. Metropolitan Achievement Test
6. Peabody Individual Test
7. Stanford Achievement Test
8. Tera Nova Wide Range Achievement Test
9. Woodcock Johnson Revised tests of Achievement

School district’s can allow home educated children to take the national normed tests that most districts give to their students every year. School districts can extend to supervisors of home education programs the opportunity to have home educated children participate in the district’s health program, since these students must receive the same health tests as public school students. School districts may provide supervisors with planned courses, texts and other curriculum materials as soon as possible following a supervisor’s request.
